MacDonald Training Center Recognized for SunPass Packaging

by Chad Huff

Some matches are made in Heaven. Other important ones are made on paper. Such became the case when the MacDonald Training Center in Tampa signed up to package transponders for FDOT's SunPass program.

Also on hand for the event was Jim Freyvogel, CEO and President of MacDonald Training Center who said the program is about much more than jobs. "For most Floridians a SunPass is the key to convenient and enjoyable motoring," Freyvogel said. "For the people we serve, SunPass is the key to building self esteem, building professional resumes, building careers and building productive lives."

On hand for the event was Turnpike Executive Director, Jim Ely along with other representatives from Florida's Turnpike Enterprise and the SunPass Program. Mr. Ely called the event one of the most important that he's ever attended.

Once the ¼ millionth transponder was packaged, work stopped, balloons fell and a thunderous round of applause erupted to mark the milestone. One phrase was heard over and over again: This is a win-win for everybody.

"This is such a rewarding program that has many benefits; not just to our SunPass customers, but to the community and those in need. The SunPass transponder packaging is a quality product made by quality people." Mr. Ely said.
